Getting Bad.

This is about the season for pent up meanness to assert itself and it is doing so. First the forged check man got away with nice little sums of money and groceries. Next burglars made two or three demonstrations, and last Tuesday night chicken thieves visited the hen houses of Joe Ferguson, Robert S. Green and E. J. Duncan and reduced the egg producers considerably at each place.

FLATTERING INVITATIONS

Are Being Sent To Many Tax Payers By Board Of Supervisors.

The Board of Tax Supervisors adjourned Thursday until Jan. 26 after a sitting of ten days. County Judge Knight displayed good judgment in selecting the board this time and it has proven to be an industrious and energetic body. The presence on the board of former County Clerk R. T. Stowe has been a big advantage, as his knowledge of the real estate transactions of record in the Clerk's office was a great assistance. In all more than 400 raises were made on the assessments turned in. There will be five days for hearing protests, beginning Jan. 26 and the board will doubtless receive many callers. Sheriff Smith is serving the notices this week and will try not to overlook any one who is entitled to one of the welcome invitations. It was reported at one time that the board had dug up about $1,000,000 of mortgages forgotten by the holders, but the report was probably exaggerated.

The members of the board are: C. W. Garrett, Odie Davis, R. T. Stowe, T. C. Jones, W. H. Jones, G. H. Bryant and G. J. Jackson.

BUGGY CRUSHED HORSE KILLED

Falling Tree Caught Rig But Youthful Driver Escaped Injury.

ACCIDENT NEAR OAK GROVE

Warning Of Danger Given By Wood Choppers But Misunderstood.

Julian Moore, a youth who resides with Mrs. Sadie Whitlock, near Oak Grove, narrowly escaped death last Wednesday, when the horse he was driving to a buggy was killed and the vehicle wrecked by a falling tree.

Moore was out driving when the accident occurred. Mr. Will Ledford was having a tree cut near the road and when the choppers saw young Moore coming up the lane they made an effort to warn him not to pass until the tree had fallen, but the buggy top was hoisted and he probably did not hear them or misunderstood their efforts to stop him. As he drove up the tree fell upon the rig, crushing the horse to death and demolishing the buggy. Young Moore was unhurt, although his escape was almost miraculous.

The horse and buggy belonged to Mrs. Whitlock.

M'CORMACK IS AROUSED

By Resolution Ordering Attorney General To Prosecute Board of Health.

SUFFRAGISTS ON DECK.

Bills Are Piling Up And Now Aggregate Between 200 and 300.

The introduction of a resolution Thursday by Matt S. Walton, of Lexington, instructing the Attorney General to investigate the financial affairs in connection with the State Board of Health, and refer any findings to the grand jury of Franklin county, caused Dr. J. N. McCormack to leap to his feet to second the resolution.

"There is and has been a conspiracy to circulate these false statements," said Dr. McCormack. "I want the fullest possible investigation. It gives me great pleasure to second the resolution. I court the fullest possible inquiry, to the end we may stop this persecution, that has been going on for several years. The statement is false, and the man making it knows it is false, and I want it stopped."

It is claimed that $63,000 was unlawfully expended by Dr. McCormack as Secretary of the Board of Health for a long period.

A resolution providing a committee of five to investigate rumors that many persons were drawing two salaries from the state was passed by a unanimous vote. Many bills have been introduced.

N. SYFERS PASSES AWAY

Operated Upon For Appendicitis Saturday Night But Too Late

PERITONITIS HAD RESULTED

Was Pianist At The Princess And Organist At Grace Church.

Norman Syfers, the young musician who was operated on Saturday night for appendicitis, died at eight o'clock Thursday night. Funeral services were held by Rev. Geo. C. Abbott, of Grace Episcopal Church, at six o'clock yesterday morning, and the body was sent to Cincinnati for interment, accompanied by the young man's mother, his younger brother, his nephew, a young man named Smith, and Mrs. W. D. Cooper, a friend of the family.

Young Syfers was taken violently ill Friday night and the next night was taken to the Hopkinsville Infirmary suffering from an acute attack of appendicitis. An operation was performed and it was found that the appendix was practically gone and that a general peritonitis existed. His condition was regarded as desperate and there was hardly a chance for him at any time.

The young man, who was under 21 years of age, came here last fall as pianist at the Princess Theatre and was found to be a fine musician as well as an affable young man. He made many friends and had become a member of the First Baptist church. He had recently been engaged as organist at Grace Church. His mother and younger brother were here with him during his illness.

Much regret is felt over the untimely death of so promising a young man.

Inspiration in Regret.
 The life without regret is the life without gain. Regret is but the light of fuller wisdom from our past, illuminating our future. It means that we are wiser today than we were yesterday. This new wisdom means responsibility, new privileges; it is a new chance for a better life. But if regret remain merely "regret," it is useless; it must become the revelation of new possibilities, and the inspiration and source of strength to realize them, each other; as love increases prudence.—William C. Jordan.

Strange Human Foods.

The Chinese get a very palatable food from the chrysalis of the silk worm. The poor remove the envelope, broil the chrysalis and eat it with salt and pepper. In the homes of wealth, however, the chrysalis is fried in lard, butter or oil, and mixed with the yolk of an egg. But the strangest of all food is the larvae of a certain fly, common in California and known as the Ephedra. The flies are washed on the shore in windrows and can be collected in bushel baskets. The Indians gather them, dry them and grow fat on them.

LIKE OLD LEANDER

"He Stopped Not for Brake, and He Stopped Not for Stone."

Mary Draper was well worth winning. Pretty, stylish, a good comrade, accomplished, and worth $100, 000 in her own right. No wonder that Wadsworth loved her. To do him justice, he had fallen in love with her before he accidentally found out the fact of her riches, but as he figured it out, that was no objection.

If she cared for him, they could take the money and enjoy life together, just the same as if he had happened to be the one with the money. Wadsworth's philosophy was his own. It was the philosophy of extracting as much happiness as possible out of life with the least possible amount of exertion.

Wadsworth and Miss Draper had met at a little, out-of-the-way town on the banks of the Mississippi. They had boated and fished and wandered around in the woods together, and Wadsworth, cynic though he was,
 had been hard hit. He had told her of his people, of his profession, and of what he was pleased to call, with a twinkle in his eye, "his prospects."
 He was a lawyer, making about $1,500 a year, and a lazy, cheerful existence he was leading, as he admitted.

But he promised to work harder if Mary would marry him, and he had not been by any means a laggard in asking her to change her name from Draper to Wadsworth. His awakening to the fact that Mary was rich occurred in this way. He was rowing a skiff containing himself and the girl along a sandbar one evening, when she remarked that her father was a lawyer. "Not Draper of the L. B. C. & K. C. railroad," said Wadsworth, inquiringly. "Yes," said the girl; "did you ever meet him?"

"No," was the reply, "but he was pointed out to me in the courtroom once in Cleveland. But he is from New York, and I thought you said you were from Buffalo."

"I came here from Buffalo to visit my aunt," replied Miss Draper.

"The fellow who spoke to me about your father said he was a millionaire."

"I guess he is all of that," was Miss Draper's response.

"Well," remarked Wadsworth, "I thought I was trying to capture a poor girl."

"To be perfectly frank with you, Mr. Wadsworth, I have $100,000 of my own."

"Well, cheer up, Miss Mary," was her companion's reply, "it might have been twice as much. Anyway, it doesn't make me care for you any the less. If I win you we can browse around on the interest of that and live the laziest, dreamiest, happiest life in the world. Of course, if you won't have me, I'm glad to know that you have the wolf at such a disad-vantage."

He spoke jestingly, and quizzically as he almost always did, but somehow the girl liked his way. He was undoubtedly an interesting man, and an accomplished one. He was at some, apparently, with all that was best in hooks, and out of doors he was equally at home. He had taught her to row and swim, and his gaiety was contagious and irresistible. But was there any seriousness and stability to his character? Was he capable of any sacrifice?

They parted at the close of her visit south without any understanding. Wadsworth had been perfectly businesslike about his proposal, made before the fact of her fortune had been disclosed. He still said that if she would marry him that he would not be obliged to do anything so ridiculous as work, and that he and she could live ideal lives.

Miss Draper asked for time to consider. This he cheerfully assented to.
 It was June 15 when she left. "Make it sixty days," said Wadsworth, smilingly, as the train pulled out.

On August 10, he got a letter from Miss Draper which read as follows:
 "I am coming up from New Orleans.
 The train stops at Newton for ten minutes. Will you take the ferry and come over. I wish to speak to you."

"MARY DRAPER."

On the night of August 10, Wadsworth was at the ferry landing. It was a warm night, and he was dressed in a seersucker suit which weighed in the ounces. He looked at his watch. It was eight o'clock.
 The train was due across the river at ten. He looked up at the road on the river bank and saw a darkey going by on a mule. "What time does the ferry come over?" he called out.
 "Ferry done husted, boss," was the reply. "Dey ain't gwine run her till Monday."

"The devil," said Wadsworth to himself. At his feet rolled the mighty Mississippi, tawny of color and strong of current. Numberless little eddies turned and twisted in its depths, and it stretched away to the Gulf mile-wide and ominous.

Wadsworth meditated. "I told her nothing could stop me," he mused.
 "Well, Wadsworth, here is the time to make good. If Leander could make six miles, I ought to go one."

"He stopped not for brake, and he stopped not for stone. He swam the Euxine river when ford there was none," hummed Wadsworth, as he wrapped his low shoes in a handkerchief, put his suit together, tied it with his soft hat in a bundle and fastened the entire kit securely on his head. It weighed about three pounds, and Wadsworth congratulated

the lightness of summer clothing.
 Then he looked up at the star-strewn night, and the great moon slipping by, and walked into the current.

From where he stood to the other shore was a full mile, but the strength of the current was such that he had wisely calculated on swimming diagonally across the river and landing some distance from the shore at Newton. He was swimming sailor-fashion, with the strong, easy stroke and taking his time. Overhead the stars twinkled, and the golden globe of the moon sent a wake of yellow light along the water. The river plashed closely and lovingly against him and rolled oily from his back as he swam steadily on. Once or twice the current seemed to grasp at him, but he threw it off with a strong stroke, and at one particular point several sturdy overhand strokes seemed necessary to bring him out of a swirl he found himself in.

He was swimming in a dream. He looked ahead and saw the car reach the platform and the girl looking out of the car window for him. He had reached the middle of the river and the full volume of the current reached out and clasped him with the grip of a wrestler. He eased in his stroke and let the current take him downstream, working his way gradually towards the Illinois shore. It seemed to him that the strength of the water was abating, and that he had passed the worst of it. He was commencing to tire a little. It was a long swim.

Finally the eastern bank stood up holdily and closely at hand, and Wad-worth, with renewed speed, swung in and reached land. "Good boy, Leander," was all he said as he began to dry himself off by sweeping the water from his body with his open hands. After drying himself, he dressed and went to the little station.

Before the train got to Newton Miss Draper had been talking to the conductor.

"We stop at Newton for ten minutes, don't we?" she queried.

"Yes, ma'am," said the conductor.

"There's a ferry there, I believe?"

was Miss Draper's next question.

"It isn't running now," said the conductor.

"Are there any boats there?" said Miss Draper.

"Some at Newton," was the conduc-tor's response.

"Are there none on the Missouri shore?" queried Miss Draper, anxiously.

"I don't think so," was his answer.

"Were you expecting any one over?"
 he inquired.

"Why, yes," said Miss Draper, "that is—if the ferry was running."

"Well, the only way to cross tonight would be to swim across, and it isn't likely that anybody would try that," was the conductor's reply, as he went forward.

At Newton she leaned from the car in a state of morbid fear. Yes, there was Wadsworth. He had seen her, too, and came rapidly up to the car.
 She came out on the platform, and the first thing she said was: "How did you get across the river? The ferry is broken, they told me—did you swim the river to meet me, Boh?"

It was the first time she had called him by any other name than Mr.
 Wadsworth. It was a good sign, he thought. She put her hand up to the back of his neck. It was still wet with the grip of the Father of Waters.

"Well, Mary, to be perfectly square with you, I did take a little swim to keep the date," he said.

She looked at him lovingly. "Have you got any money with you, Boh?" she asked.

"Why?" was Wadsworth's answer.

"Because I want you to take this train with me to Chicago. I will be your wife the minute we can find a minister. I was going to tell you to wait a year when you came here tonight, but you can have me now any time you want me. Oh, Boh, why did you run such a dreadful risk as that?"

They passed into the car still talking. The train drew out from the little station, and the platform, deserted and bare, lay black in the shadows. Further down the sand of the river the bank shone white under the moonlight, with catlike smoothness, and arching its tawny flood to the night, down rolled the Mississippi to the sea.

By Counsel.

An old gentleman, now deceased, never seemed to be satisfied unless he had several cases pending in court.
 The old gent had just won a case in the justice court, when the loser, in a combative frame of mind, exclaimed:
 "I'll law you to the circuit court!"

Old Gent—I'll be thar.

Loser—And I'll law you to the supreme court!

Old Gent—I'll be thar.

Loser—I'll law you to 'ell!

Old Gent—My attorney'll be thar—West's Docket.

Hair and Harmony.

"Do you think there is any good reason for a musician wearing his hair long?"

"Well," replied the sordid person.
 "If he's a violinist it might come in handy to have hair enough to patch up his bow, but I don't see any excuse for a pianist or a cornet player."

The Incongruities.

"Give me a penny, will you, Mr.
 Huggins?" asked the young boy of the gentleman caller.

"Oh, Tommie!" said the sister; "you must not ask a stranger for a penny.
 It's not polite."

"Is it polite for him to give it to me?"

And She Couldn't Slap Him.

A teacher in a tenement district hurried from the school to find the mother of a pupil who had been taken ill.

"Can you show me where Mrs. Angelo Scandale lives?" she inquired of a cherub transplanted from the sunny south to a dark sunless alley.

"Yes, teach, I show you," and a willing, sticky hand dragged her on with such speed as to make her stumble over an Italian dame seated on the threshold.

After the teacher's breathless flight toward the clouds the little hand stopped tugging.

"There where Mees Scandale live," indicated the horizontal arm and finger, "but she downstair sitting on the step," finished the smiling lips.

Making Fun for Fechter.

The great tragedian, Edwin Booth, had a keen sense of the ridiculous, and frequently told of a performance in which the late Charles Fechter was appearing. In one scene Fechter had to hand over some money to the villain, which he did in a very deliberate manner, counting one, two, three, four, five, six and so on. The interest centered on Mr. Fechter having enough coin to satisfy the rapacious demands of Mr. Bad Man, and the audience was becoming restless and impatient to know if he (Fechter) could make the right change. Finally a young Irishman in the gallery, getting tired of the delay, called out, "Say, Mr. Fechter, why don't you give him a check?"—Chicago Journal.

POLITENESS OF VALUE

IS CONSTANT HELP AND BENEFIT TO OTHERS.

No Greater Good In This World Than Love, Kindness and the Consideration of Others in the Home.

Politeness that is bred in the bone and is a constant use creates in the character a resemblance to a flower whose beauty and perfume pervades the atmosphere in which it develops, and is a constant help and benefit to others.

I suppose there is no greater good in this world than love, kindness, and the consideration of others in the home.

Boys in a family where there are no girls, owe it to their mother to help her with the heavy housework. There is nothing degrading in pushing a washing machine or turning a wringer, but on the contrary it is honorable service. Any boy who will let his mother do any heavy work that can be done by him is making a wrong start in life and is laying up trouble for somebody's daughter when he marries her.

Most of us take life too seriously and fail to see the bright and beautiful side of things as we plod along with our daily work. Cheerfulness and the ability to be happy and make those around us happy are not Divine gifts, but simple heart growths that can be cultivated at the same time we cultivate corn and the flowers. They are crops that pay 1,000 per cent.

The most beautiful thing in the world is a wholesome, sweet-tempered girl, whose cardinal points are usefulness, cleanliness, neatness and politeness—whose natural loveliness is so irresistible that people swarm around her like bees around a honey-suckle. She is a tonic to the ill and unfortunate. She is the embodiment of joy, and her friends are legion.

This girl is the one who helps her mother—who sings at her work—who caresses and cheers her father, looking after his comfort—who works instinctively and quietly without ostentation.

She thinks her people are the finest people in the world and they adore her as she deserves.—Julie Gordon.

SOME HELPS FOR WASHDAY

Several Simple Ways by Which Busy Housewife Can Save Time and Strength.

When taking clothes off the line fold smoothly the wash cloths, bath towels and hose and lay them away without ironing. They are just as good for use as though they were ironed, and the busy wife needs to save her time and strength whenever possible.

Always iron embroidery on the wrong side so as to bring out the pattern.

A tablespoon of kerosene in starch will keep it from sticking.

If you scorch an article badly when ironing, moisten it with lemon juice, rub in some salt and lay it in the sunshine. If it is only a slight scorch the sunshine will remove it.

If possible, sprinkle the clothes the night before ironing day. The dampness will be evenly distributed and they will iron easily next day.

Black goods will not look shiny and the white starch will not show on it if it is ironed on the wrong side.

A Country Pot Roast.

In a hot frying pan melt a lump of butter or fry out a small piece of pork. While very hot put in the roast, browning all sides. Roll it over. Do not insert the fork so as to keep all the juice in. When browned put in a pot which has been heated; put water in the frying pan to get any juice that may have escaped and pour over the meat. Cover closely and cook slowly for three hours, turning occasionally. Keep about a cupful of water under the meat and sprinkle a little flour and salt over it fifteen minutes before taking out. Turn several times.

Potato Markie.

Take six medium sized, freshly baked, meaty potatoes, scoop out in a chafing dish, breaking them slightly, season to taste with salt and pepper; take off the under pan of the chafing dish and place the under pan directly on the flame; add a good lump of fresh butter. When the butter is incorporated, add sweet cream to bathe nicely; add then paprika till the potatoes have attained a light brick color; leave over the flame till fairly dry. When about to serve, add a drink of madeira; stir and serve.

To Clean a Light Cloth Suit.

Buy two large blocks of magnesia. Lay suit or white felt hat on sheet on flat surface, and rub into the garment as much magnesia as it will hold. Do both sides. Lay article away in sheet for a week or more. Then take up, shake and brush, and the suit will be much cleaner and fresher. Especially good for white felt hats and baby coats.

Mock Apple Pie.

One and one-half common crackers rolled, juice of one lemon, one cup sugar, two-thirds cup water, little salt and nutmeg. Mix and bake with two crusts.

Mend Before Washing.

A great advantage is found by the thrifty housekeeper, if all ruffs or worn places are mended in clothing before being sent to the weekly wash.

FROM THE BEAR'S PAW

By ANNIE HINRICHSSEN.

Gibraltar and I are partners. Gibraltar is a dancing bear. Some people might say I am Gibraltar's owner, but between him and me there's never been a question of master and henst. We're partners, share and share alike.

We walk from town to town. We have enough to eat, and there is no sweeter sleep than the sleep one gets under the stars.

One day as Gibraltar and I were strolling along a country lane we saw a girl coming toward us. She stopped a little way and called:

"Will your bear hurt me?"

"No, indeed, miss," says I. "He's as gentle as a kitten."

She came up to us and my! she was pretty. Her eyes were like the sky and her cheeks were like the wild roses in the hedges.

"Will he mind if I pat him?" she asked.

She patted old Gibraltar's head and pulled his ears. "I do love bears," she said. "What's his name?"

I told her and she said that was a beautiful name for a bear.

I made him dance and she sat down by the road and laughed and clapped her hands.

After awhile she said she must go. She dropped a dollar in my money basket and went her way.

It was about sundown and we stopped at the first haystack and ate our supper and went to sleep.

In the night I woke up. There were people on the other side of the haystack. A woman was crying. Then a man said he was sorry; that he couldn't help it; he didn't love her any more; change was the law of nature and she must accept conditions.

She said something about the love of the old days and the claim it gave her. That seemed to make the fellow tired and he said he didn't care for hash love. He asked her to give him something—I couldn't hear what—and she said she wouldn't, it was hers and gave a little scream.

"Oh, you brute," she said. "You've broken the chain and stolen it."

That woke Gibraltar and he growled. The man came around the haystack. "What are you doing here?" he asked.

"Sleepin'," I says. "Get out," says he. "This isn't a hobo's roost."

Next morning when I woke up I saw we were near a house and we ambled toward it looking for a breakfast. It was a big house with a long porch in front of it and on the porch were a lot of people. It wasn't a farmhouse, as I had supposed, but some swell's summer cottage, and Gibraltar and I had butted into a house party.

When they saw us they called to us to come to the porch, they wanted Gibraltar to dance.

On the lowest step sat my little sunshine lady and beside her was the fellow I had seen the night before. Near them was a tall woman with yellow hair.

After Gibraltar had done his stunts I passed the money basket. The last person it came to was the fellow beside the sunshine lady and he was so busy talking to her that he never looked at what he pulled out of his pocket and threw into the basket.

I bung the basket on Gibraltar's paw and told him to make a bow. He bowed so low that the basket slid off and fell at the sunshine lady's feet. There was something in it which didn't look like money and she picked it up.

It was a gold locket about the size of a half dollar. She opened it, and there was the fellow's picture and: "To Bentrice, from George."

She snapped the locket shut and handed it to the tall woman. "This is yours, I think," she said.

The man looked as if he wanted to smash things, Gibraltar and me particularly.

The little sunshine lady put her hands in Gibraltar's fur and shook his big head. "Gibraltar," she said, "you have done a great deal for me today and I thank you, old fellow. Even out of the paws of bears—"

She kind o' choked then and I took up Gibraltar's chain and we went off.

When Snuff Was Useful.

"Some people have the knack of doing and saying the right thing at the right time," comments Lord Rosemore in "Things I Can Tell." And as an instance of the value of presence of mind in an emergency, he tells of a dog fight in Bond street, London. Two terriers that belonged to two socially eminent ladies had engaged in a businesslike tussle.

The distracted ladies alternately made fearful but vain appeals to their favorites and to the bystanders. Just as the fight seemed about to terminate fatally for one of the animals a blase-looking "chap" elbowed his way through the crowd with a polite "Permit me."

He calmly surveyed the two struggling dogs; then he produced a handsome gold snuffbox and taking a pinch of snuff from it he dropped a little on the end of each dog's nose. A fit of sneezing ensued, which compelled them to release their grip, and the combat came to an end.

With a polite bow to the ladies, the strategist walked leisurely away.—Youth's Companion.

The Only Thing.

"Well, I got something in free of duty?"

"What was that?"

"The English cigarette I was smoking as I left the dock."

A QUESTION OF CASTE

By BELLE MANIATES.

There was no reason, apparently, why these two people, Carter Johns and Cleo Rivers, should not have pursued their friendship openly and freely, but they had met in a most unconventional way, and there seemed to be a tacit, though unspoken, agreement between them that their meetings should be clandestine.

Cleo was naturally interested and excited when she found the house next to theirs, which had been vacant for so long, had been sold and was to be occupied.

Her first surreptitious inspection of one member of the new family was from a window overlooking their back yard.

Johns, tall and straight, was critically examining and testing a stupendous touring car.

Cleo's heart beat pleasantly. She was a horn coquette, and presently, attired in the most delectable of white-embroidered linen gowns, white shoes and chiffon hat, she sauntered into the back garden and began picking some flowers. Eventually she gave a sidelong glance. Cleo was not conventional.

"Won't you have a rose?" she asked. With eager haste and thanks he crossed the boundary line to the two gardens.

"I think we should be neighbors," she said, with a little laugh.

"I quite agree with you," he replied, decorously, "and since there is no one present to introduce me, I will do myself the honor of presenting myself, Carter Johns."

"My name is Cleo Rivers," she said, with naivete. "Did you just move in last night? We heard the place had been sold."

"We are only partly moved," he said, smiling. "I was anxious to see if my new car came through safely. I think it is in good shape. Do you like to ride?"

"Indeed I do!" she cried, enthusiastically.

He couldn't tell afterwards how it really happened, or which one of them first made the suggestion, but, anyway, he had an engagement to take her out in the automobile that night. He was afraid she would think him presumptuous, but she had seemed pleased, and blushed as she told him she would have to meet him at the stable—that "they" would never consent.

She looked very elegant in her dark attire, as she met him that night back of the stable.

They quickly sped away from the crowded streets, and when they came to a road that was free, Carter "let her out" in a way that was intoxicating to Cleo.

"He is simply grand!" she thought, with a little thrill of recollection when she was safely back in her own room.

The next afternoon as she was walking through the park, he passed her in his bluish-white car. She bowed, and he lifted his hat courteously and passed on. Before he had gone very far his car stopped, and he got out to investigate the cause. She came on and up to him.

"Something wrong?" she asked, shyly.

"Not much out of gear. I will adjust it in a moment. May I take you home?"

"Certainly," she replied, joyously.

"Can't we ride out into the country?" he asked, entreatingly.

She assented and they rode on out into the open country, where speed limit laws were not enforced. They came home more slowly and sentimentally.

And Cleo in her little white bed that night lay awake to live over and over again the joys of this beautiful and secreted time.

They met chance-directed in many places, and the evening flights in the big car were uninterrupted until fate in the shape of a settled rain precluded the carrying out of the usual program.

"There is a little summer house in our garden," he said, wistfully, as she came to the rear of the stable that night to tell him how disappointed she was. "Can't we have a little visit there?"

In the cozy little arched house, listening to the soft music of the summer rain, Carter's feelings reached a climax.

"Cleo!" he murmured, "I love you!" But she had slipped from him and sped across the lawn.

She spent the night crying over the inditing of a letter which she handed to him over the hedge the next morning.

"I shouldn't have let you say that last night. It's all a mistake. The first time I met you I guessed what you thought—that I was one of the family. I let you think so. I am maid to Miss Lorraine. Forgive me."

"CLEO." Presently a district messenger brought a note to Miss Cleo Rivers. "Dearest Cleo: I am the chauffeur! Only the servants have moved in here as yet. Meet me usual place tonight, please, and let me say again what I did last night. Yours always, "CARTER."

More Serious.

"We've been robbed!" announced the senior member of the West side meat market.

"Every cent in the cash register gone, I suppose?" his partner said. "It's worse than that! A side of bacon has been stolen!"—Judge.

Kansas Philosopher.

A reporter for the Globe asked an Atchison man for an item the other day. "Well," the man replied, "I did hear several interesting things, but will not repeat them. It is not because I don't want to help you, but it is because I don't believe nine-tenths of what I hear. I don't exactly distrust mankind, but I don't believe what people say, I'm sorry to say. It is not because people are crooked, but because they are careless."—Kansas City Star.

Women in Congress.

The late James Freeman Clarke, answering a man who feared that if women had the ballot they would go to congress, said: "Perhaps so, but not until we want them. And when we want them we shall no longer be shocked at their taking such positions."

FROM KITCHENS OF GERMANY

Ideas Here That May Be Something New to the Housewives of America.

Ragawana—Scald one cup milk, put into mixing bowl with one-eighth pound or one-fourth cup of butter, one-half cup sugar. Stir until sugar is dissolved. When milk has cooled add one large egg (beaten). Now sift two and one-half level cups of flour, one teaspoon of salt three times, dissolve one-half yeast cake in one tablespoon of cold water, add yeast to mixture, then gradually mix in sifted flour and stir well. Put into a warm place to raise over night, well covered. Beat down the first thing in the morning, let raise, beat down again, then put in baking pan, let raise again. Bake with indicator 350 degrees. This is a fine foundation for any raised cake. You can make apple cake, raisin cake, cinnamon cake, doughnuts (by adding a little more flour).

Streusel Cake.—Put mixture in shallow pan, just spread it on bottom of pan same as you would apple cake and always butter on top of cake just before you put in oven. Whatever you put on top of cake put it on just before putting in oven.

Streusel mixture for putting on top of cake:

This should be made after you put the cake in pan for the last raising, and when made put it in a cool place until ready to use.

Streusel Mixture—One-eighth of a pound of granulated sugar, one-eighth of a pound of flour, one-eighth of a pound of butter, one teaspoon cinnamon, one ounce of almonds cut up small. Stir sugar, flour and cinnamon together; add butter cut into dry ingredients with a knife so it will be crumbly, then add nuts. Mix up well.
(The butter should be left in the kitchen so it is not hard when ready to use.) When the cake is well risen spread thickly on cake and bake at once. This is very fine if made right.
Please try this and let me know what you think of it. Measure with measuring cup and spoons. I am very exact in measuring. You can make jelly doughnuts by cutting two forms as thin as cookies, wetting the edge of one, putting a little jelly in center and putting the other on top, pressing edges down firmly.

The Housekeeper

To test a cake to see if it is thoroughly baked, use a skewer.

French chalk will clean a slightly soiled white chip hat.

A teaspoonful of extract will flavor
a quart of any mixture.

Potatoes should boil slowly to prevent the skins from curling off.

To kill burdock, cut off close to the ground and pour a little gasoline on the roots.

If shoe polish has become dry from standing too long, moisten it with a little turpentine.

Blotting paper saturated with turpentine may be placed in drawers to keep away moths.

Allow two teaspoonfuls of baking powder to each cup of flour when no eggs are used.

A table of weights and measures, typewritten and framed under glass, should hang in every kitchen.

Allow from four to six eggs to each quart of milk in making custard to be turned from the mold.

Lillian's Kidney Stew.

Carefully wash the kidneys and boil until tender, set aside to cool. When quite cool cut in tiny squares, removing all fat; place in stew pan with one tablespoon butter, a little salt, dash of pepper and large cup of milk. Simmer gently for half an hour, then thicken with a spoonful of flour wet with a little cold milk. Serve on a platter with small squares of dry toast.

Stuffed Spanish Onions.

Peel the onions and scoop out centers. Parboil five minutes and drain.
Make a stuffing of the chopped onion taken from the centers, bread crumbs, salt and pepper and butter. Fill the onions heaping full and sprinkle the tops with buttered crumbs. Cover and cook in a pan contain'g a little water, brown slightly before taking from the oven.

Baked Squash.

I always have baked squash and this is the way I do it. Just cut, or chop rather, squash in halves and put in oven. Do not peel it. When soft take a spoon and scoop the inside out, which you will find is very easy, then add piece of butter, pepper and salt, and your squash is ready for table at short notice.—Boston Globe.

Lima Bean Salad.

Drain the juice from a can of lima beans, pour a cup of boiling water over them and drain again. Chill, dress with French dressing, place on tender leaves of lettuce and sprinkle lightly with grated horseradish.

Baked Apples.

Select apples of uniform size, wash, core, arrange in baking dish and fill the cavities with sugar, butter and spices, or with plain sugar, as preferred. Bake and serve with whipped cream.

LOOKED LIKE AN EASY MARK

Things That Happened to Mr. Boggs Set Him to Wondering—Refused to Loan His Umbrella.

Harry Boggs, expert accountant for the public utility commission, is beginning to wonder if he really looks like the proverbial easy mark or whether what has happened to him recently is just a streak of luck.

The other evening while sitting in the lobby of the Onelda hotel a stranger neeosted him and asked him to cash a check. "Why, I don't know you," said Boggs. "I don't know you," said the stranger, "but I thought you might cash this check for me."

A light or two later while Boggs was waiting for a car at Market and Delaware streets another man, equally unknown, walked up to him and asked him to lend him his umbrella.
A few minutes. Rain was falling steady-ly and Boggs was wearing a Panama hat, with which he is very well satisfied. "What'll I do while you are gone with my umbrella?" asked Boggs, more or less peevishly. "Well, I thought you would not mind waiting until I came back," replied Mr. Nerve. "Say," said Boggs, "I want to tell you that you've got a crust an inch thick, but you don't get my umbrella." Now Boggs is wondering if some one will try to borrow his toothbrush or ask the loan of his house and lot over in Terre Haute.—

THE LOGICIAN

Farlie—Father, what is a logical candidate?

His Dad—As a rule, my son, he is a man of exceptional intellectual brilliancy whose reasoning faculties are entirely applied to explaining before the election why he ought to win and after the election why he didn't.

Merely a Habit.

"My son has tried to elope three times during the last month, but I tell him he doesn't know his own mind."

"Such persistency would indicate that he did. Why don't you let him marry the girl?"

"Well, eneh time he has picked out a different girl."

Stay Was Brief.

"Is this Mrs. Smith? I called you up to ask if you could say anything good of Bridget Farley, who lived with you as cook."

"Yes, I can say one thing. She left without breaking any dishes."

"That's encouraging. How long did she stay?"

"One hour."—Harper's Weekly.

No, You Never Do.

"Women are the inferior sex," declared Mr. Pomper, with an air of finality.

"Oh, I don't know about that," said Mrs. Pomper. "You never see two women waste a lot of valuable time arguing about the respective merits of their watches."

Much Havoc Wrought.

"It's true," said Mrs. Plodgett, "that I sometimes lose my temper, but the storm soon blows over."

"Yes, my dear," answered Mr. Plodgett, ruefully. "A cyclone soon blows over, but it often does an immense amount of damage."

Crowded Corridor Controversy.

"I'd have you understand, sir, that I am not a door-mat!"

"I beg your pardon. I stepped on your foot without thinking."

"By Christopher, sir, it's my opinion that you do everything else the same way!"

Must Be an Oversight.

"Here is a rather unusual story of Kentucky written by an eastern novellist."

"What's unusual about it?"

"There are 350 pages in the book without a single reference to the heroine's 'dellious southern drawl.'"

Trying and Buying.

"Your wife was down town today trying on gowns all the afternoon, my wife says."

"That doesn't bother me."

"You talk like a millionaire."

"I don't mind her trying; it is her buying that is trying to me."

Unmoved.

"Isn't it sad to think of poor King Manuel having to pawn his family jewels?"

"No, I couldn't spare up a tear for poor King Manuel if my life depended on it."

Quite So.

"The trouble with you, fluffers, is that you are too easily discouraged."
"Pshaw! That's the kind of talk that usually emanates from people who have never been caught under themselves."

AMUSEMENTS.

Not many of our amusement-loving citizens will miss the opportunity of seeing the latest musical comedy success, "Seven Hours in New York," which comes to Holland's Opera House Jan. 21. A number of inquiries for seats have come from out-of-town parties, and all indications point to a packed house. It will be wise to secure seats early. There isn't the slightest "off-color" actor suggestion in the entire performance, which is in itself a passport to favor. The songs, of which there are eighteen, are good and fit into action of the play, which is the English manner, and a commendable feature of the performance.

Arthur B. Lander, of Lafayette, has sold his storehouse and residence at Julian to G. W. Allen, of Garrettsburg, the price paid being $2,000. Possession will be given Feb. 1. Mr. Lander still has about $8,000 dollars worth of merchandise in the Julian store, which he intends closing out within the next month.

Cheap Marriages.

Since the eugenic marriage law went into effect in Wisconsin common law marriage contracts which cost ten cents each have become popular. No license, no doctor, no preacher, nothing but ten cents to record the contract.—Elizabethtown News.

Trial Postponed

CREAMERY CONFERENCE.

Called For Monday Morning At The H. B. M. A. Office.

Monday morning at 10 o'clock a meeting of the farmers of the county has been called to consider the creamery proposition as made by the Peter Fox & Sons Company. This company has made a proposition to build and maintain a creamery if the farmers of the county will furnish them cream. They ask no capital, only that so much cream be furnished them.

Representatives from the Peter Fox & Sons Company will explain their proposition to the farmers. Mr. Nichols, a dairy expert from the State Experiment Station, will also address the farmers on the possibilities of a creamery and other subjects in connection with dairying. This meeting will be held in the offices of the Business Men's Association and it is hoped that many of the farmers of the county will attend.

Women Everywhere

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Women from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from all sections of this great country, no city so large, no village so small but that some woman has written words of thanks for health restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No woman who is suffering from the ills peculiar to her sex should rest until she has given this famous remedy a trial. Is it not reasonable to believe that what it did for these women it will do for any sick woman?

Wonderful Case of Mrs. Stephenson, on the Pacific Coast.

INDEPENDENCE, OREGON.—"I was sick with what four doctors called Nervous Prostration, was treated by them for several years, would be better for a while then back in the old way again. I had palpitation of the heart very bad, fainting spells, and was so nervous that a spoon dropping to the floor would nearly kill me, could not lift the lightest weight without making me sick; in fact was about as sick and miserable as a person could be. I saw your medicines advertised and thought I would try them, and am so thankful I did for they helped me at once. I took about a dozen bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and also used the Sanative Wash. Since then I have used them whenever I felt sick. Your remedies are the only doctor I employ. You are at liberty to publish this letter."—Mrs. W. STEPHENSON, Independence, Oregon.

A Grateful Atlantic Coast Woman.

HODGSON, ME.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hodgson, Maine.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health. Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO., (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.
